Sanctuary Banners

There are many ways of expressing and exploring our faith through the arts: drama, painting, poetry, music. Mary Nahhat loves making banners (when she isn't singing, teaching, or making shawls). This season, she made new banners helping us visualize a line of scripture, Romans 8:38. On the left panel, we see a strong white beam dividing the top from the bottom. On the right panel, though, the barrier seems to have been demolished, with white pieces tumbling to the bottom of the banner. The apostle Paul said, "nothing can separate us" from God's love, and Mary has helped us internalize those words in a new way. If you're interested in learning more or would like to help with future artwork, please contact Caleb Williams, caleb@rofum.org.

LETTER FROM THE PASTOR

Dear Friends,

Today begins Lent, the six-week journey towards Easter. Lent comes from the Old English word "lencten," meaning spring. So yes, Lent is a journey toward spring, to a time of when the green of the grass and the buds on the trees signal rebirth and new beginnings. We, too, go in search of this rebirth.

During this season we are setting aside some time on Wednesday evenings to gather for some important reflections about the renewal of our community and world. Each week begins with a 40-minute video presentation from an expert in their field. After the presentation, we gather together for coffee and conversation. It should be a time to both get to know each other a bit better and to wrestle together about what it means to be the community of faith.

This week's conversation is particularly important. It is entitled Bringing America Together. I have seen the presentation and highly recommend you come and take part. The presenter is Arthur Brooks. Brooks is an American social scientist, musician, and columnist for The New York Times. He is the president of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank, and is best known for his work on the junctions between culture, economics, and politics. His message is both challenging and refreshing.

Please plan to come and join us this Wednesday from 6:00 - 7:30 pm. We will gather in the sanctuary to see the presentation and then meet in the new gathering space for conversations.

The journey to Easter begins.

I am glad to be on this journey together.

Grace and Peace,
