LETTER FROM OUR PASTOR

Dear Friends,

This week our nation pauses to remember the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. This is the only federally recognized celebration of the contributions of a man whose primary vocation was as a Christian pastor and preacher. For me this holiday is indeed a “Holy Day,” more of a religious observance than a cultural or historical observance.

I once heard that when asked, “What authors have most influenced your thought?” Dr. King responded, “There are four: Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John.” That has always left an impression on me. Monday’s holiday is our reminder that civil rights, social justice and the work of dismantling racism are central to our faith and core to what it means to be a follower of Jesus.

There is no room in the teaching of scripture and in the life, death and resurrection of Jesus for racism on any level. What Dr. King so boldly reminded us is that one cannot love God and accept any form of racism, oppression, or systems that hold a person or a specific group of people down. Dr. King’s legacy should wake us up and cause us to take inventory personally and globally.

For the past year, I have been a part of a group of leaders here at Royal Oak First that have been engaged in prayerful work of understanding our Christian commitment to anti-racist work. These conversations have been difficult and challenging but also inspiring. This is work we will continue to do as a congregation. This weekend I invite you to consider being a part of the next set of conversations and work toward what it means to be a community of justice and reconciliation. If you are interested in being a part of these conversations, please contact our Adult Discipleship Coordinator Joyce Hollingsworth at jhollingsworth@rofum.org.

Thank you for being a part of a faith community that is willing to engage in this most urgent and faithful work.

Grace and Peace,
