LETTER FROM OUR PASTOR

Dear Friends,

This Sunday we will celebrate World Communion Sunday. It is my hope that in doing so we will be reminded of what a powerful symbol it can be in our collective efforts to create a more just, inclusive, and welcoming world.

World Communion Sunday holds a rich history that dates back to the early 20th century when the idea of celebrating Christian unity and the global nature of the church emerged. It was during a time marked by division and conflict that the vision of a day dedicated to celebrating our shared humanity and interconnectedness was born. Since then, World Communion Sunday has become an annual reminder that we are part of a larger tapestry of faith and that the love of Christ knows no boundaries.

In our current world, where racial tensions and divisions persist, World Communion Sunday takes on even greater significance. As we lean into the work of racial reconciliation, embracing the diversity within our congregation and beyond, this day serves as a beacon of hope. It reminds us that we are called to break down the walls that separate us and to build bridges of understanding and love.

Allow me to share a quote from Jim Wallis that beautifully captures the essence of World Communion Sunday: "Two of the greatest hungers in our world today are the hunger for spirituality and the hunger for social change. The connection between the two is the one the world is waiting for..."

These words remind us that our spiritual journey and our commitment to social justice are deeply intertwined. By nurturing our spiritual hunger, we find the strength and inspiration to engage in the transformative work of creating a more just and inclusive society.

As we gather around the Communion table on this special day, let us remember that every person, regardless of their race, nationality, or background, is a beloved child of God. Let us open our hearts to the vast diversity of humanity and embrace the beauty that lies in our differences. Through the act of sharing in the Communion meal, we symbolically declare our unity as one body in Christ.

May this World Communion Sunday serve as a catalyst for change within our hearts and our community. Let us be encouraged to continue the work of social justice and racial reconciliation, knowing that our spiritual hunger will empower our pursuit of social justice. Together, we can create a world that reflects the love and inclusivity of Jesus.

Grace and Peace,
