Easter Sunday

LETTER FROM OUR PASTOR

Dear Beloved Community,

Easter is here. And this year, maybe that means a little more than usual.

Because Easter is not just a pretty morning, a bright dress, a full sanctuary, or a reason to sing the big songs—though thanks be to God for all of that too. Easter is the stubborn, defiant, beautiful promise that after all this world does to us, God is still here.

Jesus is still here. Grace is still here. Mercy is still here. Beloved community is still here.

And some of us really need to hear that.

Some of us will come to worship this Sunday full of joy. Some of us will come in tired. Some of us will come carrying grief, questions, or just the weight of a long season. Some of us may be walking through the doors wondering whether this could be a place to belong.

I want you to know: it can be. That is part of the good news too.

Easter means death does not get the last word. Fear does not get the last word. Despair does not get the last word. A new season is beginning—not because everything is suddenly fixed, and not because we suddenly have all the answers—but because Jesus lives, and hope keeps showing up.

Expectant hope. That is the word for this Easter.

So come as you are. Come joyful. Come weary. Come curious. Come needing a fresh start. Come and hear again that joy is still for God's people. Come and see that resurrection is not far away. It is still breaking in, right here among us.

Welcome to Easter at Royal Oak First. We are glad you are here!

Grace and Peace,
